

Sunridge Observatory: A Brief History

The Sunridge Observatory was the original project in 1979 of the newly formed Medicine Hat Astronomy Club. Jim Pratt (deceased) owner of Sunridge Farms, had offered the club a long term lease on a dark site on his property. The club president at that time, Rod Silliphant, drafted the original drawings of the observatory and its site. The construction and engineering of the observatory was directed by the club president, Eric Petke. Following the death of Mr. Pratt, the club acquired ownership of the site in 2000 with the generous financial support of the Medicine Hat Lions Club.

Many individual astronomy club members and local companies have made valuable contributions in the development of the Sunridge Observatory site. Wittke Iron Works, in conjunction with Kurts Iron Works, built the domed structure. IXL had donated the bricks to support the dome and build the fences. Arthur Kraus has devoted much time to the landscaping of the site, as have brick layers Gerhardt Shulz and Kurt Hilgendorf.

Club members Eric Erdmann and John Leader provided the club with its first two telescopes; a portable f/6 Dobsonian with a 10-inch diameter mirror and a telescope assembly with a 16-inch diameter mirror mounted in a German equatorial mount driven by motors in both azimuth and elevation. The latter telescope is housed in the domed structure, and was acquired with financial support from the Alberta Wild Rose Foundation.

The astronomy club has recently replaced the 16-inch mirror with a 18-inch one.

This telescope is the main instrument used to show persons of all ages the night-time sky, from the moon to the planets and the objects beyond. Future plans include building a second dome (2013), computer control of the main telescope, new presentation equipment for the class room and investigating the feasibility of doing radio astronomy on the present site.
